

PLANS FOR BANQUET

BE GIVEN WEDNESDAY EVENING BY COMMERCIAL CLUB.

PROGRAM FOR EVENING

Several Good Speeches to Be Delivered and a Fine Menu to Be Served.

The Commercial club banquet to be held Wednesday evening at the Linville hotel will be one of the most successful banquets yet held by the club. A great deal of interest is aroused over this affair, and it will be largely attended. The banquet will commence at 7:45.

Outside of several speeches to be delivered, a president and secretary of the club are to be selected to succeed Mr. Robinson and Mr. Orear, who resigned at the last meeting of the club.

The name of Nick Sturm has been mentioned for president of the club, and it is thought that he will take the place. Mr. Sturm is well qualified for the position and has always been a Maryville booster. The naming of Mr. Sturm to that position would meet the approval of every member of the club, and it is hoped that he will accept the place.

The speakers of the evening and their subjects are:

"My Impression of the Work of Commercial Clubs in the West," George L. Wilfley.

"The 1911 Chautauqua," P. O. Landon.

"Entertainments That Will Bring the People to Maryville in 1911," S. G. Gillam.

"Home Trade; How We Can Create a Loyal Spirit Toward It," C. J. Alderman.

"Manufacturer; How the Commercial Club Can Help Them and What Can Be Done to Get Them to Locate Here," Dave Moore.

"What the Commercial Club Can Do to Help the City Administration," Mayor A. S. Robey.

Good of the order.

The menu for the supper is as follows:

Consomme clear in cups, celery, Spanish olives, boiled sugar cured ham, Saratoga chips, sliced ox tongue, mustard pickles, fresh shrimp salad, mayonnaise, hot tea biscuits, extra sifted peas, hot baked potatoes, vanilla ice cream, ribbon cake, cigars, black coffee.

Those who have purchased tickets and will attend the banquet are:

MANY ATTENDED SACRED CONCERT

The sacred concert given at the First M. E. church Sunday night by the choir of that church, assisted by the First Baptist church choir, under the direction of Professor P. O. Landon, was heard by an audience that filled the auditorium and many were in the gallery.

The chorus work was good, the anthems, "God of Our Fathers" and "How Long 'Till Thou Forget Me?" and the chorus by the ladies, "Shepherd of Israel," receiving special favorable comment.

The solo work by Miss Marie Jones, Miss Bessie Crandall and Mr. Louis Perria, and the pipe organ numbers by Professor Landon were the best parts of the program.

The Sunday concert programs given in our city are meeting with the unanimous favor of our people, and there is but one other thing that draws such crowds of people together in common enjoyment, and that is the public school programs.

THE REPORTER FOUND A WAY

(Chicago News.)

A correspondent for a Chicago newspaper recently was placed in a position where the exercise of his inventive genius and resourcefulness extricated him from an embarrassing position. He was accompanying a famous national character on a special railroad train from the west bound for Chicago where the aforesaid famous character was to be received with the loud acclaim of his admirers. The correspondent's job was to take down the thoughts and ideas of the f. c. as they issued from his lips during the trip and telegraph them ahead to an expectant public, which was watching the f. c.'s progress.

His dismay on learning that the train was to run unhesitatingly by intermediate telegraph stations and stop only when Chicago was reached produced a grin on the face of the brakeman who had vouchsafed the information.

"Guess you're up against it," he said. "You oughta taken along some carrier pigeons to transfer your writings to Chi."

The reporter, with a sheaf of "copy" in his hand, stared out of the window as the train dashed by a telegraph station at sixty miles an hour. A small crowd of persons stood on the platform and gaped at the special. Among them was a telegraph operator, distinguished by his shirt sleeves and other unmistakable signs. The reporter was struck with an idea.

"Why can't I throw out my copy as we pass through a telegraph station?" he excitedly asked the brakeman. "I'll get some oranges or apples from the diner, cut a hole through them and stuff the paper in them and wait till we get to the next town."

"There ain't no diner on now," remarked the railroad man. "It was taken off a couple of hours ago. No butcher, either," he added.

The reporter's face fell. It flashed through town after town. The f. c. issued a statement to his admirers in Chicago which got no further than the newspaper man's note paper. His last edition time was getting perilously close. He could imagine his reception by the managing editor when he reached his office.

At length the reporter opened the door of the baggage car and peered in. The baggage master was snoring in a chair. And then the reporter's eyes became fastened upon a small pile of shoes reposing in a corner.

With glee he gathered up the footwear and dashed out of the car to his own quarters. The rest was easy.

The telegraph operator and the usual group of hangers on at the next station noticed a young man hanging out of a window of the rapidly approaching train and gesticulating wildly. As the car rushed by a shoe was hurled from the window and fell at the feet of the operator. That surprised man picked up the shoe, and to his wonderment found a dollar bill protruding from its depths. Also there was the "copy" and a note of explanation. The dollar was for the operator.

The entire supply of shoes was exhausted before the train with the exultant reporter reached the city limits. His interviews with the f. c. were generously displayed on the first page of his newspaper when he sought a news stand after carefully noting that the baggage master was still unaware of the loss of his property.

WOMEN CAN VOTE

WASHINGTON ADOPTED EQUAL SUFFRAGE AMENDMENT.

ALSO CAN SERVE ON JURY

One Hundred Thirty Thousand Voters Gained in the State of Washington.

Spokane, Wash., Nov. 14.—One hundred and thirty thousand women were added to the voting strength of the state of Washington by the adoption of an amendment for equal suffrage to the constitution at the election on November 8. Formal announcement will be made by Governor Hay within ten days, or as soon as the official canvass of the returns has been completed. Women who are taxpayers also are eligible for jury duty. The women of Spokane probably will cast their first votes at an election to ratify the new charter, which provides for a commission form of government.

Mrs. May Arkwright Hutton of Spokane, president of the Washington Political Equality League, entertained her co-workers and a large number of advocates of equal suffrage at a banquet the evening of November 10, when it was announced that November 24 had been set aside as a special day of thanksgiving for the newly enfranchised women of the state. Mrs. Hutton said:

"I attribute the success of the movement largely to the broad-minded ideas of the men of Washington, who stand for a square deal in all things. Another reason for our success is the fact that the management of the campaign has been at all times under the control of the women of the state. Minnie J. Reynolds, formerly of Colorado, did excellent work, and to her the women of this state owe much for their great victory at the polls last Tuesday."

"Arrangements are now under way for a celebration in honor of adding the fifth state to the suffrage banner of states that will be the most remarkable demonstration of the campaign in this state, or, in fact, in any part of the northwest."

HAS GOOD IDAHO APPLE ORCHARD

Hubert Conway the well known young farmer living just west of Maryville, received on Monday some apples from the orchard owned by himself and his brother, J. R. Conway, at Twin Falls, Idaho. The apples are of the Rome Beauty variety and they certainly are beauties. The Democrat-Forum was presented one that weighed just twelve ounces, the other two weighed eight and eight and one-half ounces respectively. They were a cream and bright rose in color and the taste is all that could be desired, even in a Missouri Jonathan.

Mr. Conway and his brother own a 160-acre ranch four miles west of Twin Falls, sixty acres of which are in an apple orchard that is just now in its first bearing year. The remaining 100 acres is in alfalfa, that yields bountifully three crops a year. A view of the Conway ranch shows that it is in progressive hands. J. R. Conway is one of the leaders in agricultural pursuits in that region and had charge of the Idaho exhibit at the St. Louis world's fair.

"I feel that the people of Missouri can appropriately join in the observance of this occasion. During the year just past nature has brought a bountiful return from farm and field, labor has been generally employed at fair wages; business has been both active and prosperous. We have enjoyed a freedom from lawlessness and public disorder, our laws have been generally satisfactorily observed and impartially enforced, without resort to extreme or unusual efforts. Our public service has been efficiently conducted and free from scandals or abuses; the public health has been safeguarded and improved; our public schools have furnished an equal opportunity for success and achievement.

"By the way, Roland, did you just come from the bank? Is Mr. Lockwood back yet?"

"No; I got off this morning. I don't think he is, Sam. Did you want to see him?"

"Well, yes," Sam admitted. "I guess you know about that, Roland."

"Mean business, sometimes, asking favors of these bankers, eh, Mr. Graham?" Burnham remarked.

"Graham added dolefully. "Yes, it is unpleasant," he admitted confidingly.

"You see, there's a note of mine come due today, and I'm not able to take care of it or pay the interest just now. But I guess it'll be all right."

"Mr. Lockwood's kind, very kind."

"I'm afraid you're a little too sure, Sam," Roland contributed tactfully. "When there's money due Lockwood he wants it, and most times he gets it or its equivalent."

"But," Burnham changed the subject adroitly, "what was this—burner, did you say—that Mr. Barnette forgot to tell me about?"

"Oh, just one of my inventions, sir. I've spent most of my life at it, sir, but somehow nothing has ever turned out well—not so far, I mean. But I mean to hit it yet."

"That's the way to talk," Burnham cried heartily. "Never give up, I say! But tell me about some of these inventions, won't you?"

"Well," Sam knitted his fingers and poked his tips reflectively—"I patent."

"WHAT WAS THIS—BURNER?"

ed a new type thrashing machine once, but I couldn't get anybody to take hold of it. You see, I haven't any money, Mr. Burnham."

"How would you like to talk it over with me some time? I'm interested in such things—as a sort of side issue."

"Will you?" Sam's eagerness was not to be disguised.

"Be glad to. Tell me, how did you get your power?"

"From gas, sir, though coal will do most as well. You see, I've got this burner patented that makes gas from crude oil—no waste, no odor nor trouble and little expense. It'd be cheaper than coal, I thought; that's why I invented it. I could get steam up mighty quick with that gas arrangement. I use it for lighting here in the store now."

"Do you, indeed?" Burnham's tone indicated falling interest, but such diplomacy was lost on Sam.

"If you've got time I could show you. It's right over here."

A glance at his watch accompanied Burnham's consent to spare a few minutes. "There's a telegram I must send presently," he said. "But I'd like to see this burner, if it won't take long."

"No, not long; just a minute or two." Sam was already dragging the affair out from under the window box. "You see?"

He went on to expound its virtues with all the fond enthusiasm of a father showing off his firstborn and wound up with a demonstration of the illuminating appliance. I'm afraid, though, he got little encouragement from Mr. Burnham. He considered the machine with a dispassionate air. It's true, and admitted its practical advantages, but wasn't at all disposed to take a roseate view of its future.

"Yes," he grudged when Sam put a match to the jet, "that's certainly a very good light."

"All right, ain't it?" chimed Roland, enthusiastic.

"Oh, it may amount to something. It's hard to tell. Of course you know, sir," he continued, addressing Graham directly, "you've got competition to overcome."

Sam's old fingers trembled to his chin. "No-o," he said. "I didn't know that. I've got the patent."

"Of course that's something. But the Consolidated Petroleum crowd has another machine, slightly different, which does the same work and, I should say, does it better."

"Is—is that so?" quavered Sam. "My patent?"

"Now, see here, Mr. Graham," Burnham argued, "we're practical men both of us."

"No, I shouldn't say that about my self," Sam interrupted. "Now, you sir, I can see you're a man who understands such things. But I—"

"Nevertheless you must know that a patent isn't everything. You said a moment ago a man had to have money to make anything out of his inventions."

"Did I?" Sam interjected, surprised. "Certainly you did. And dead right you are. A patent's all very well, but supposing you're up against a powerful competitor like the Consolidated Petroleum company. They've got a patent too. Granted, it may be an infringement of yours even. What can you do against them?"

"Why, if it's an infringement?"

"Sure, of course. But do you suppose they're going to lie down just because an unknown and penniless inventor sues them? Bless you, no! They'll fight to the last ditch. They'll engage the best legal talent in the country. You'll have to carry the case to the supreme court of the United States if you want a winning decision. And that's going to cost you thousands—hundreds of thousands—a million!"

"I'LL BE GLAD TO SHOW YOU ANYTHING I'VE GOT HERE."

"Never mind. A thousand's enough," said Sam gently. "I see what you mean, sir. It's just another case where I've got no chance."

"Oh, I wouldn't put it as strong as that."

"But I have no money."

"Still, you never can tell. I'll think it over if I get time."

"Why, that's kind of you, sir; very kind."

It was at this point that Roland rose to the occasion like the noble ass he is. Roland never could see more than an inch beyond the end of his nose.

"Say, Mr. Burnham," he floundered, "don't you think you could help Sam to?"

"I think," said Mr. Burnham, with additional business of looking at his watch, "I'd like to send that wire I spoke of."

"Yes, Roland," Sam agreed meekly. "you mustn't keep your friend from his business. I'm glad you looked in, sir. You'll call again, I hope."

"Thank you," said Burnham, moving toward the door.

It was too much for Roland's sense of opportunity. He rolled in Burnham's wake sullenly reluctant. "Say Mr. Burnham," he exploded as they got to the door, "if you'll just offer Sam five—"

"That will do!" Roland collapsed as if punctured. Burnham turned to Graham with a wave of his hand. "I'm leaving on the afternoon train, but I'll get time I may drop in again and talk things over with you. There might be something in that thrashing machine you mentioned."

"I'll be glad to show you anything I've got here."

"All right. Good day. I'll see you again perhaps."

This cavalier snub was lost on Sam.

an essential of whose serene soul is the quality of humility. He followed them to the door as grateful as a lost dog for a stray pat instead of a kick.

"Good day, sir. Good day, Roland," he sped their parting cheerfully.

But it was a broken man who shut the door behind them and turned back, fidgeting his gray chin.

"Perhaps Mr. Burnham was right. Only I was kind of boplin!" Now, Mr. Lockwood over there!"

He shook himself to throw off the spell of depression.

"Well, well! He's kind, very kind. With this young man in here and everything gettin' fixed up and new stock comin' in— I'm sure Mr. Lockwood

"ONLY HER SENSE OF DUTY SUSTAINED HER."

"I'll see it the right way for us. He's kind, very kind."

Thus it was that he presently called up the stairs in a very cheerful voice. "Betty, are you pretty near through up there?"

The girl's weary voice came down to him without accent. "Yes, father, almost."

"Well, then, you keep an eye on the store, please. I'm goin' to step out for a minute."

"Yes, father."

"And if—if anybody asks for me I'll most likely be down to the depot with Mr. Duncan."

He didn't mention that he contemplated calling on Lockwood, because he feared it might worry Betty.

Betty knew, or, rather, divined. And she had no hope, no faith such as made Sam what he was. She came down the steps listlessly. Only her sense of duty sustained her. She owed something to old Sam for the gift of life, dismal though she found it. He needed her. What she could do for him she would.

Sighing, she went to work. In work only could she forget. The soda glasses needed cleaning and the sirup jars replenishing, for the new order of sirups had come in the previous evening.

After a time, to a tune of pounding feet, Tracey Tanner pranced into the shop with all the graceful abandon of a young elephant feeling its oats. His face was fairly scarlet from exertion and his eyes bulging with a sense of importance. The girl looked up with out interest, nodding slightly in response to his breathless "Lo, Betty."

"Father's gone out," she said, holding a glass to the light, suspicious of the lint from her dish towel.

"I know—seen him down the street." The boy halted at the counter, producing a handful of square envelopes.

"Note for you from the Lockwoods, Betty," he panted. "Josie ask me to bring it round."

Betty put down her glass in consternation. "From the Lockwoods?"

"Uh-huh!" Tracey offered it, but she withheld her hand, dubious.

"For me, Tracey?"

"Uh-huh! It's a invitation. I got four more to take." He thrust it into

"JOSIE ASK ME TO BRING IT ROUND."

her reluctant fingers. "Got five, really, but one of em's for me."

"An invitation, Tracey?"

"Yeh. Hope you have a good time when it comes off." Already he was bounding toward the door. "Goodbye!"

"But what is it, Tracey?"

"Aw, it tells in the invitation. S'long."

"From the Lockwoods!" she whispered.

Suddenly she tore it open, her hands unsteady with nervousness.

The envelope contained a square of heavy cardboard of a creamy tint with scalloped edges touched with gold. On the face of the card a round and formal hand had traced with evident pains the information:

The envelope fluttered to the floor, while the card was crushed between the girl's hands. For a moment her face was transfigured with delight, her eyes blank with rapturous visions of the joys of that promised night.

"Oh—it 'ud be grand!"

Then suddenly the light faded. Her eyes clouded; her face settled into its discontented lines. She stuffed the card heedlessly into the pocket of her dingy apron and took up another glass.

"But I can't go; I've got nothin' to wear."

Free Remedy For Weak Bowels

There are two forms of bodily cleanliness, the external and the internal. The one is for your pride in yourself; the other for your life and health. Both are important, but of vastly more importance in the long run is the internal cleanliness.

This is one point that all should watch about their body—the cleanliness of the bowels. Keep them clean and free from obstructions. To do this you must have one or two movements of the bowels each twenty-four hours. If your system does not do this naturally, in the process of eating and drinking, then you must obtain aid of some kind. After finding out that cathartics, salts and such things relieve you for a day, but bind you up worse than ever the next day, then try a simpler and more natural remedy like Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin.

For the skeptical the best way to begin is to send your name and address to Dr. Caldwell for a free sample bottle. Use it as directed and if it convinces you that a brief continuance of its use will relieve you permanently—that it will train the stomach and bowels muscles to again work naturally at certain hours—then buy it of your druggist at fifty cents and one dollar a bottle, just as so many others are doing. They began with a sample bottle then bought a fifty cent bottle, and now, fully convinced of its merits, they buy the one dollar family size. All the members of the family can use it down to the very youngest.

A brief use of this grand laxative tonic will cure constipation in its worst form, indigestion, liver trouble, sick headache, sour stomach and such ailments and keep you in continuous good health at a very small cost. Such is the experience of many families like that of Mrs. Oscar Fleener, Unionville, Ind. J. P. Daniel, Saron, Tex., and hundreds of others that could be named.

Dr. Caldwell personally will be pleased to give you any medical advice you may desire for yourself or family pertaining to the stomach, liver or bowels absolutely free of charge. Explain your case in a letter and he will reply to you in detail. For the free sample simply send your name and address on a postal card or otherwise. For either request the doctor's address is Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 1509 Caldwell building, Monticello, Ill.

SHOES CAN AID ARMY'S COURAGE

General Wood Calls Soldiers'
Footwear All Important.

FEATURE OF RECENT REPORT.

Chief of Staff Insists That Officers Should Inspect Brogans and See That They Fit, and That Uncle Sam's Left Over Supply Be Sold at Once and a Decent Assortment Purchased.

In his annual report, just made public, Major General Leonard Wood, who was recently detached from the command of the department of the east to assume the more important duties of chief of staff of the army, reviews the work of the department of the east during the period it was under his command. The report shows that shoes were very much on the general's mind.

"Shoes," he says, "is a subject which demands serious and constant attention." He was so much impressed by the importance of it that he recommended the issuance of general instructions whereby the fitting of shoes to the feet of soldiers should be supervised by officers, but just where these were to receive their instructions the report does not say.

Officers Are Blamed.

The general finds that "officers give this matter too little attention. Frequently they give it no attention, and the result is a very serious loss of efficiency from sore feet and misshapen feet, resulting only too often directly from failures to properly supervise the fitting of shoes. A much closer and detailed supervision over the fit of our soldiers' shoes is imperatively necessary."

Reverting once more to shoes, the report says that "there is a very considerable excess at almost every post of black and tan shoes of the old pattern as well as of marching shoes of the first issue (heavy pattern). It is extremely difficult to force the issue of these now that the stock is becoming reduced to the extreme sizes. Some means of getting rid of this stock should be devised. It is believed that steps should be taken to place all this class of shoes in the hands of some experienced salesman who could dispose of them on a slight commission at a slight loss, if any, to the government."

More Infantry Wanted.

Abandoning the subject for a moment, the general says that at least twenty additional regiments of infantry are urgently needed. He explains this need by asserting that "the calls upon the infantry are already severe and will increase rapidly in the immediate future incident to the garrisoning of the Hawaiian Islands and the Isthmus of Panama."

Re-enters the matter of shoes. "Our troops," the general continues, "do not march as they should. This is due almost wholly to the lack of interest in this feature of infantry training on the part of officers, especially commanding officers. In this connection company commanders must give more attention to the feet of their men and see to it that their shoes fit and that their feet are carefully looked after. Sore feet are one of the greatest causes of inefficiency of infantry troops in the field and can be almost wholly avoided if the officers do their duty in looking after the feet of their men."
